Original:

The 3-month concordat period, intended to facilitate the company's financial recovery, ultimately culminated in its declared bankruptcy. Following scrutiny of the January 24, 2019, financial reports, the court board determined the company's commercial activities to be unsustainable, resulting in the rejection of the concordat request and the subsequent declaration of bankruptcy [19, 20]. This concise phrasing removes bullet points and utilizes more formal language like “determined” and “unsustainable” for a scientific tone.

Corrected:
